

AUTHOR NOTES

Is'haaq Akbarian is an assistant professor in the Department of English Language and Literature at the University of Qom, Qom, Iran. He received his PhD in TEFL from the University of Tehran. His areas of interest include learning, teaching, and assessing vocabulary, and self-assessment. He offers reading courses and introductory research methods to undergraduate students.

ishaaq.akbarian@gmail.com

Department of English Language and Literature

Faculty of Humanities, University of Qom

PO Box No. 37185-396, Qom, Iran

David Coniam is a professor in the Faculty of Education at The Chinese University of Hong Kong, where he is a teacher educator, working with ESL teachers in Hong Kong secondary schools. His main publication and research interests are in language assessment, language teaching methodology, and computational and corpus linguistics.

Coniam@cuhk.edu.hk

Faculty of Education, The Chinese University of Hong Kong

Shatin, N.T., Hong Kong

Peter Falvey is Adjunct Associate Professor and Consultant in the Faculty of Education at The Chinese University of Hong Kong. His research and publication interests are in text linguistics, language testing and assessment, language teacher education, and academic staff development.

falveyphk@yahoo.co.uk

The Chinese University of Hong Kong

c/o David Coniam

Faculty of Education, The Chinese University of Hong Kong

Shatin, N.T., Hong Kong

Marita Härmälä works as a university researcher at the Centre for Applied Language Studies in the University of Jyväskylä, in Finland. Her duties include compiling tests in the National Certificates of Language Proficiency, as well as training item writers and raters. Her research interests are language testing for professional purposes and issues related to language education policy.

marita.harmala@ju.fi

Network for Language Education Policies / Centre for Applied Language Studies, University of Jyväskylä, Finland

Rachael Ruegg has an MA in Applied Linguistics and is currently pursuing a PhD in Linguistics within the department of Linguistics and Applied Language Studies at Macquarie University in Australia. Her research interests include vocabulary, writing and assessment.

rachaelruegg@gmail.com

Linguistics and Applied Language Studies
Macquarie University, Australia

Yuko Sugiyama is a senior lecturer in the English Language Institute at Kanda University of International Studies in Japan. She has an MA in TESOL from the Monterey Institute of International Studies and her current research interests are assessment and bilingualism.

sugiyama-y@kanda.kuis.ac.jp

English Language Institute
Kanda University of International Studies, Japan