

THE UNIVERSITY OF MELBOURNE

Faculty of Arts

Anthropology at Melbourne

Why study Anthropology?

OPEN YOUR EYES TO DIVERSITY

Study the extraordinary cultural diversity of humankind and explore the ways people interact, organise their relationships, and find meaning in their lives in different cultures and societies around the world.

In studying Anthropology, you'll start to notice the things happening around you and challenge the assumptions behind those things you've taken for granted. You can choose to take subjects in politics, ethnic and national identity, religious practices, sources of power and influence, economics, families, gender and sexuality. There are even exchange opportunities overseas.

WHERE CAN A MAJOR IN ANTHROPOLOGY TAKE YOU?

In our globalised world, your ability to make sense of and work with cultural differences will be in demand from governments, NGOs, and the private sector. You'll be equipped to work in a variety of careers that entail working with people from different cultural backgrounds, such as teaching, health care, law, journalism, marketing, and aid agencies.

▶ Find out more: unimelb.edu.au/study/anthropology

“Studying Anthropology has given me a way of being in relation to others. Learning ethnographic methods – talking to people, participating in their activities, linking lived experience to societal structures and seeing how they impact each other – the value of that cannot be overstated in a world that can sometimes feel very alienating.”

Eleanor Jorgensen